Nuremberg's diverse range of museums makes the city a key destination for cultural tourism, with something for every interest. The Germanisches Nationalmuseum is the largest museum for art and culture in the German-speaking world. It boasts an impressive collection spanning art, archaeology, and cultural artifacts from prehistory to the modern era, attracting history and art lovers alike.

The Documentation Center at the Nazi Party Rally Grounds (Dokuzentrum) offers a sobering look at Nuremberg's role during the Nazi period, using multimedia exhibits to examine the rise and impact of the Third Reich. The Memorium Nuremberg Trials focuses on the post-war Nuremberg Trials, offering insights into international law and justice. For a family experience, the Toy Museum showcases Nuremberg's rich tradition as a toy-making center. It features toys from various eras. Meanwhile, the Neues Museum appeals to modern art enthusiasts with its contemporary art and design collections, housed in striking modern architecture.

The Dürer House in Nuremberg is the former residence of the renowned German artist Albrecht Dürer. Built in the 16th century, it is now a museum dedicated to his life and works, offering insights into his artistic techniques and personal history. Together, these museums form a key part of Nuremberg's cultural landscape, drawing visitors from around the world to explore its rich heritage.
